

What is R&D tax relief?

It is a UK government tax relief aimed at incentivising companies in any industry seeking a scientific or technological advance through problem-solving.

What type of project qualifies?

There is a misconception that R&D tax relief only applies to high tech industries such as pharmaceuticals, but this is not the case. Qualifying projects must just seek to achieve an advance in knowledge or capability through the resolution of scientific or technological uncertainty.

There are detailed criteria for what constitutes an advance, but it does not necessarily have to result in a new product. In addition, you must be able to show how the uncertainty was overcome and what the R&D methodology was.

Successful claims

We have made successful claims on behalf of clients in sectors ranging from manufacturing and construction to software development, saving them hundreds of thousands of pounds in corporation tax in the process. However, to obtain tax relief certain complex conditions must be met.

How we can help

Our technical expertise and rigorous approach enable us to provide precise advice tailored to your requirements; throughout the process our focus is always on what will be of most benefit to you.

What expenditure qualifies for relief?

Our experienced team of experts will identify the revenue expenditure capable of being included before making the enhanced expenditure claim.

Example of a profit-making company with and without R&D tax relief

No R&D enhancement

Turnover		1,000,000
R&D P&L cost	100,000
Other tax allowable costs	600,000	(700,000)
Taxable profits		300,000
Corporation tax @ 19%		£57,000

With R&D enhancement

Corporation tax @ 19%	£32,300
Adjusted profit	170,000
R&D enhancement @ 130%	(130,000)
Taxable profits as above	300,000

In this example a corporation tax saving of £24,700 is achieved.
